TASK 5 Madurese Birth

Madura is a unique island. It has many customs that makes it different with other place. One of them is Madurese birth. Every regency has other customs to celebrate it. But, generally the process involves pēlēt betteng, aqiqah, and 40 days.

Pēlēt betteng is a ceremony which is held when the unborn children of pregnant women have attained the age of 7 months. Generally, in my area (Pamekasan), they will hold it by providing some materials. There are water and various of flowers, coconut, chicken and its egg, coins, and white cloth. After providing all materials needed, there will be some people giving water which has been combined with flowers to the pregnant women who have worn white cloth and hold coconut, chicken, and its egg. Then, the people will put some coins. While doing it, there will be some men recite Surah Yusuf. After all the process gets finished, the landlord will invite some guests and provide them food and beverage. It's little different when my friend told me about it in her village named Pasongsongan (Sumenep). She said that there was no egg that held by the pregnant women, but they would get water in their husband. Then, there would be some people recited Al-Qur'an completely before the process was begun. So, the ceremony of pēlēt betteng in my area is not really same with the ceremony in other Aqiqah is a ceremony which is held when the pregnant women have given birth and their sons have attained the age of 7 or 40 days. It is done by providing goats and it will be killed and served to some guests who are invited. This is called aqiqah.

clap the hen until the hen responds. There is a myth when the hen does not respond namely the baby that will be born he can not speak or he will be dumb. The pregnant mother must hold her because she must pray, so that the baby that will be born become a beautiful or handsome baby until they are old like a hen. The older the hen, the more beautiful the quill. In the other side, the colour of the hen that must be held by the pregnant mother is undetermined.

We know that the hen is always related with the egg, so besides the pregnant mother holds a hen, she must also hold an egg. This egg also has different meaning. We know that if the hen ovulates, the egg exits smoothly from the hen. Because of that, the pregnant mother must hold egg, so that she can born her child smoothly. After her family bathsheer, she must fell the hen and the egg and then she must run away to her bathroom.

The next thing that must be in Pelet Betteag ritual in Madurese is yellow coconut. This coconut is different with the other coconut and sometimes it is difficult to be found. Madurese people usually called it by "Niyor Ghending". In addition, there are two yellow coconuts in Pelet Betteag ritual and both of them must be written Arabic writing and Jawa writing using neil or the other thing. This activity has an own meaning namely the baby that will be born, will knowledge. Furthermore, in the yellow coconut also there are baby boy and baby girl's picture, so that the baby that will be born is not sissy. In the other side, the use of yellow coconut is because the pregnant mother hopes to have a child that the skin is fluffy and yellow like the coconut. So, although the yellow coconut is difficult to be found, people will always try to find it.

The last thing that is used in Pelet Betteng ritual is bailer. This bailer is made from coconut husk. This bailer also has a handle and it is made from the tree branch. In addition, the tree that the branch is taken, it must a tree that has much leaves. The use of this bailer and this handle have a meaning namely the pregnant mother prays in order to have a child that can give benefits to other people. So, the use of the bailer and it's handle have an important function to the baby that will be born.
